Practical baking skills for displaced girls

Retrospective terms of reference | July 2022 | Molyko, Buea

Why this project mattered

Displacement can interrupt education, family support and opportunities to earn a living. We wanted to give young women a practical introduction to making food they could prepare and sell, together with encouragement and modest starting resources. Our Christian commitment to care was expressed through our team's time, the trainer's teaching and the funds entrusted to this outreach. A short workshop could open a door to practice; it could not guarantee a livelihood.

Who, where and how we selected participants

Through community enquiries and word of mouth, our team identified internally displaced teenage girls to invite. Our account records 15 participants. We arranged to use the Sunday school hall at Full Gospel Mission, Molyko, Buea, with the pastor's permission. The precise day in July has not been established.

Scope and delivery approach

The intended learning opportunity was practical baking and frying: cakes, fish pie, meat pie and puff-puff. Auntie Dorothy was invited to lead the session after we agreed the arrangements with her. Our team organised ingredients, equipment and the cooking area. The approximately four-hour format combined prayer and welcome, encouragement, demonstrations and supervised practice by some participants.

Starting resources and responsibilities

Our team arranged transparent buckets for carrying and selling products, participant support of 5,000 FCFA each, and distribution of remaining flour and oil. Dorothy's role was to demonstrate preparation and guide practice; our team handled invitations, venue arrangements, purchasing and distribution. Assistance was available regardless of participation in prayer or worship. No identifying participant information is included in this document.

Resources and intended follow-up

Funding of 400,000 FCFA was sent. The original written budget totals 342,750 FCFA, including 75,000 in participant support. The companion report preserves the original plan separately from actual spending. Its arithmetic conflicts remain unresolved; reconciliation questions are kept in our private working papers. Follow-up could record participants' voluntary accounts of practice, without claiming measured income or business success.

Document basis: Prepared some time after the project was carried out, using our account and the surviving budget. This is a retrospective record of purpose and approach, not an original pre-project authorization.
